HOPE

financial hope ...

Is rooted in the belief that God provides and cares for our needs. It reflects trust in His guidance and the understanding that, as stewards of His resources, we can navigate financial challenges with faith. This hope encourages believers to seek wisdom through prayer and Scripture, leading to responsible financial practices like budgeting, saving, and giving generously. It fosters a sense of purpose, reminding us that our financial decisions can impact our lives and those around us. Ultimately, financial hope empowers Christians to pursue stability and abundance while honouring God in all aspects of their finances.

Financial hope is the belief that positive change is possible, even in challenging circumstances. It involves envisioning a future where financial stability and abundance can be achieved through wise stewardship and intentional planning.

when hope is gone ...

Losing financial hope can result in spiritual discouragement and a weakened trust in God's provision. It may lead to anxiety, poor stewardship, and a failure to seek guidance through prayer. This loss can diminish the joy of generosity, hinder community support, and impact overall faith and well-being.

It may foster a cycle of debt, neglect of budgeting, and avoidance of financial planning, ultimately undermining long-term stability and diminishing overall well-being and quality of life.

set faith goals:

A faith goal is asking, "Lord, what would you have me do?" It reflects what you believe God's will is for you. Goals help prepare for the future and eternity but also help you be intentional and focus on what needs to be done today.

pray ...

Spend time alone with God (and your partner, if married), asking Him to reveal how He wants you to grow in your financial journey.

"Jeremiah 33:3 (ESV) Call to me and I will answer you, and will tell you great and hidden things that you have not known." (Jeremiah 33:3)

set smart goals ...

Write down your goals so that they can be measured. Ensure they are specific, measurable, achievable, realistic and time-bound. Goals may change over time and as circumstances change, so keep flexible. View goals more like a direction to take rather than a destination.

"Commit your work to the Lord, and your plans will be established." (Proverbs 16:3) ## act ...

Achieving your financial goals requires more than just planning; it demands consistent action and discipline. Without taking concrete steps, even the best goals remain unfulfilled dreams. By acting on your goals, you create momentum and set yourself on the path to financial stability and success. Faith and intention must be accompanied by action to bring results.

"So also faith by itself, if it does not have works, is dead." (James 2:17)

how are you doing?

if you aim at nothing - you'll hit it!

your financial hope

1. In what ways do you see God's provision in your financial journey?
2. How confident do you feel about managing your finances in the future?
3. What long-term financial goals have you set, and why are they important to you?
4. How do you track your progress towards these goals regularly?
5. What challenges have you faced in achieving your long-term financial objectives?

where are you on your journey?

Financial hope is the belief that we are progressing on a journey toward becoming faithful servants, managing God's resources with purpose and trust and embracing the opportunity to serve others and glorify Him through our resources.
